C2E2 Overview

- The Coalition for Conservation and Environmental Education (C2E2) is a nonprofit of agencies, organizations, and individuals fostering an environmentally literate citizenry sustaining a quality environment for generations to come.
- The Coalition took root in 1995 when the ND Department of Public Instruction invited input on natural resource education in the development of the State Education Standards from an organization with a unified voice.
- C2E2 has over forty members that include PreK-12 nonformal educators from local, state and federal agencies, K-12 formal educators, university faculty, non-profits, businesses, and concerned citizens.
- The local, state, and federal agencies have a mandate to provide educational opportunities and resources to help educate North Dakota's K-20 youth about our natural and cultural resources. To achieve our goals, we need the collaborative support and resources of a broad cross-section of the state. An educated citizen will maintain a future that is sustainable, healthy, and prosperous.
- Some of the things we do include selecting two high school seniors for the governor each year to attend the National Youth Science Camp; we support the regional and state science fairs with ribbons and cash prizes for the best environmental projects; we offer professional development training to PreK-12 formal and nonformal educators; we provide STEM boxes and other resources to the Teacher Centers and schools; members are engaged in and support Environmental and Water Festivals, Eco-eds, Conservation Days, Zoo Days, the Envirothon, the Keep ND Clean Poster Contest; and provide speakers to many classrooms and special events across the state.
- C2E2 is proud to serve as the North Dakota affiliate of the North American Association for Environmental Education (NAAEE). The Affiliate Network promotes collaboration for maximum effectiveness and efficiency, and a unified voice for environmental education across North America and beyond.

There has never been a more compelling time than now to help solve environmental issues that impact and involve our natural and cultural resources. With a growing list of partners, C2E2 is in the right place at the right time to help raise awareness, develop skills, and empower stewards of all ages to act. Support C2E2 today!
